

Creation of Life on the Earth

Ravichandran Harisamy

Department of Scientific fraternity, Neelankarai, Chennai, TamilNadu, India

Abstract - This theory is purely based on logic; built upon various facts, proved already by the scientific fraternity. The static, motionless position of the earth and the various developments on the earth's atmosphere that had lead to the creation of life-form; have all been established beyond doubt.

Nearly 2 years after forwarding of this theory to certain academies, research centers, Individuals and Universities; Dr. Sankar Chatterjee, paleontologist of Texas Tech University, suggested through his research work, that "life may have rained from the skies"; which is nothing but a strong endorsement of my theory.

The Geo-centric theory is established with a little modification; the gradual developments occurred on the atmosphere, that lead to the creation of life, have all been formulated totally on the basis of pure logical arguments; and now presented to the scientific world for due cross examination and recognition.

As this theory is a diagonally-opposite-angle of approach; one may find it difficult to understand initially. But repeated reading of this theory may help to catch its life-line.

INTRODUCTION

'Know about one link, one loop of a chain thoroughly. You have known the entire chain' – Swami Vivekananda.

These magnetic, golden, roaring simple words with an ocean of meaning echoed in my mind, after I had read a work of the Swamiji. Following the guidelines of this brave monk, this Universal guru; upon deep, intensive observation and contemplation of various activities going on around me, I was blessed to grasp certain links and loops, that had gone a long way in explaining the chain of various activities going on in this Universe; and the outcome of that logical process is this theory. What a great Master, the Swamiji is?

There exist many, particularly seven, theories about creation of life-form on the Earth. But none of them, as such, could explain the whole process of creation; each one playing its own music and so, the harmony is lost.

To understand the creation of life on the Earth, it is imperative, first and foremost, to have a thorough knowledge about Astronomy as a thorough knowledge about the milk makes it easier to understand the curd. It is an unsolved puzzle, so far; whether the egg came first, or the hen came first. Because, to lay an egg, the hen is a must; and to become a hen, the egg is a must; which implies that the form, the material of creation is something, somewhere hiding in between the egg and the hen. And what is that?

This theory of mine not only explains the process of creation of life-form on the Earth but also offers decisive solutions as well, in the fields of Astronomy and Geology; all put together in a nutshell and presented in the most simple form as 'Truth is always simple'.

The System of the Universe:

After the Big Bang, when the Universe was formed with stars of various sizes, thrown away to various distances, in all the directions; a Universal axis was also formed in between the Northern and the Southern extremities of the Universe.

Around the center of this Universal axis, all stars started revolving with a globe-like formation, @ 361°/day from East to West, each star's orbit being decided by its own mass. It is here to be noted that a star consists of a group of its own planets, asteroids, meteors and all, revolving around it. The Sun is the tiniest star, and so is nearest to the Universal axis, revolving around the center of this Universal axis @360°/day from East to West.

Around this Sun are, including the Earth, nine planets; revolving at different speeds, at different distances; each planet rotating on its own axis at different speed, with the luggage of moons, asteroids, meteors and all.

If the Earth were to move:

It is believed that the Earth rotates on its own axis from West to East @ 0.465 Km/Sec; and also revolves around the Sun, together with the Moon, @ 29.8 Km/Sec.

As no object remains Static in the Universe, lest it vanishes, the theory goes like this.

The Sun rotates on its own axis @ 1.9 Km/Sec and also revolves around a bigger Sun, say a Little Star, along with nine planets, their Moons, all the meteors, asteroids and what not, @ 220 Km/Sec.

That Little Star, in turn, rotates on its own axis, say @ 80 Km/Sec and also revolves around a Mega Star, say @ 6000 Km/Sec.

That Mega Star @ 7000 Km/Sec, a Supreme Star @ 93,000 Km/Sec.

That Supreme Star @ 48,000 Km/Sec, a Super Star @ 3,98,000 Km/Sec.

That Super Star @ 2,40,000 Km/Sec, an Ultimate Star @ 7,90,00,000 Km/Sec.... and so on.

In all these CHAIN of activities going on in this Universe, the Earth is also involved. There should, then, be 1001 forces, acting upon the Earth and on the Air.

Because, apart from rotating on its own axis @ 0.465 Km/Sec, the Earth revolves around the Sun, @ 29.8 Km/Sec, along with the Moon. around the Little Star @ 220 Km/Sec, along with the Sun.

around the Mega Star @ 6000 Km/Sec, along with the Little Star.

around the Supreme Star @ 93,000 Km/Sec, along with the Mega Star.

around the Super Star @ 3,98,000 Km/Sec, along with the Supreme Star.

around the Ultimate Star @ 7,90,00,000 Km/Sec, along with the Super Star.

and so, on as illustrated in the following diagram.

Wow..! What a speed and what a non-stop travel for the Earth; exceeding the speed of Light, the fastest travel known to me, by leaps and bounds.

Now coming..!

Under these hectic, unimaginable traveling of the Earth, can the Air be Still, Static on the Earth?

If it is argued, presumed that, the Air around the Earth also travels along with the Earth, at the same speed of the Earth, creating a Stillness of the Air, thus preventing us from detecting any movement of the Earth; I still, am left on hand, with 1001 aberrations, anomalies to be explained.

The very concept of the Earth having movements is wrong..!

The Earth becomes the Centre of The Universe:

The Sun, before settling down on its present orbit around the center of this Universal axis, oscillated for some time, one time coming a little closer to and the other time moving a little away from the Universal axis. During one such oscillation of the Sun, the Earth got chanced to enter into the Universal axis, got pushed-in straight to the center and then got tightly arrested, held-up by the force running through that Universal axis, what we term as Magnetic force. This magnetic force compresses the Air around the Earth and also the Earth's surface, to the center of the Earth; at this stage, we name this magnetic force as Gravitational force. It is not that the Earth is pulling everything towards its center; it is this magnetic force prevailing in the Universal axis that is pushing everything towards the center of the Earth, thus keeping the Earth intact.

The Earth becomes Immovable:

So, after some vibrations and oscillations inside the Universal axis, the Earth gradually lost its rotations and revolutions, came to a halt, became static, motionless, totally under the influence, control of the magnetic field. After this stage only, creation of life was possible on the Earth.

This being the fact, it can easily be ruled out that there exists possibility for life in other planets of the Sun; or, for this purpose, any other planet of any of the stars, because 'A rolling stone gathers no mass'. It will be a few million billion years between the Big Bang and the creation of life on the Earth.

But for this compression of Air by the magnetic field towards the center of the Earth, the vacuum around the Earth would have sucked out the Air and Water long time back, making the Earth a dead planet; leave alone the blowing out of the Earth to dust by the vacuum.

That is why my assertion, that the Earth is at the ‘center’ of the Universal axis, that too on the ‘axis’ of the Universal axis, kept static, motionless by the magnetic field, very safely.

The question of ‘Infinity’ does not arise at all here because, the more the Universe is extended to Infinity, the more the Universal axis is also extended to Infinity, the Earth in any case is remaining at the center of the Universal axis and so, at the center of the Universe. If the Earth were to have unbelievable, breath-taking, terrific rotations and revolutions, can the ozone layer of 3 mm thinness enveloping the Earth, ever withstand the journey? Can the same constellations of stars appear at a regular interval of 365 days?

The Earth’s Leap Year:

It is believed that the Earth over-rotates on its own axis by 6 hours/year. That means, this 2012 being a Leap year, for me, after 1 year, 6:00 AM will be a noon, 12 NOON will be a Sunset, 6:00 PM will be a mid-night and 12 MID-NIGHT will be a Sunrise. That means, today being 08/01/2012, on 08/01/2014, for me, 6:00 AM will be a Sunset, 12 NOON will be a mid-night, 6:00 PM will be a Sunrise and 12 MID-NIGHT will be a noon. And, on 08/01/2016, the Earth having completed one full over-rotation on its own axis, for me, 6:00 AM will be, as usual, a Sunrise, 12 NOON will be a noon, 6:00 PM will be a Sunset and 12 MID-NIGHT will be a mid-night; and so, I add a day to February 2016, being a Leap year. Right! But what do I see in reality? For the past 55 years I am witnessing Sunrise at 6:00 AM only; Sunset at 6:00 PM only, no variations!

The Geocentric theory – Perfected:

On top of this, if the Earth’s travel along with the Sun @ 220km/sec is given importance; it will not be the repetition of the same constellations of stars every year. The constellations should vary, if not every year, at least during a span of, say 300 years. But we have been witnessing the repetition of the same constellations of stars every year, from the time Astronomy and Astrology were formulated; and only based on their definite-repetitions and also the regular repetition of the sun and moon; the solar and lunar eclipses, to take place, even after 100 years, have all been predicted this day itself. Thus far, the Geocentric Astronomical theory is made perfect, with my addition of a Universal axis.

This being the macro theory of mine on Astronomy to substantiate that the Earth is static, motionless; the micro theory follows to endorse the same fact.

Flying along the Longitude:

Suppose I travel by an aero plane, from A to B, in 2 1/2 hrs., from South to North, @ 1200 Kmph, 3000 kms. During the entire journey, my compass shows North; my speedometer shows 1200 kmph; and my fuel meter shows consumption for 3000 kms.

As per the most popular heliocentric astronomical theory, by the time I travel from A for 2 1/2 hrs. , B should have moved to B1, roughly 4000 kms; as also A to A1; in which case, I had travelled from A, in 2 1/2 hrs, in the North-East direction, @ 2000 kmph, 5000 kms, to reach B1. Also, as my compass shows only North, I had flown sideways from A to B1. Moreover, if I could station my plane at an altitude, above A, facing North, for 2 1/2 hrs I still travel 4000 kms in the East, sideways from A to A1. as shown in the diagram.

But the aeronautical science is yet to develop a plane, flying sideways at such a speed.

Therefore, with reference to my flight from A to B, in the absence of my compass showing North-East; in the absence of my speedometer showing 2000 kmph; and in the absence of my fuel meter showing consumption for 5000 kms, I am to conclude that A and B are static. That is, the Earth is static, motionless.

The Air Movement:

It is believed that the Earth rotates on its own axis, from West to East @ 0.465 km/sec i.e. @1674 kmph. When a typhoon of 90 kmph velocity, destroys and devastates a region; how come the Earth is unaffected by the stationary Air, while rotating against it @ 1674 kmph from West to East, which is equal to a typhoon of 1674 kmph magnitude from East to West? Or, does the Air also move @ 1674 kmph along with the Earth from West to East, so as to create a stillness of Air, thereby preventing us from detecting any movement of the Earth? No, the air does not.

So the stillness of Air around me suggests that the Earth is static; with Air movements caused, only by the warmth of the Sun, varying from a tender, soothing breeze to disastrous typhoons, tornados, cyclones and storms. No other forces, due to the 'once a day rotation' and 'throughout the Universe revolutions' of the Earth, are acting upon the Air; which ultimately points out that the Earth is static, motionless.

Clearing off the clouds with the clouds:

On a partially cloudy, rainy day, I could see some three layers of Clouds.

One smoky layer, the top-most, spread across, over a vast area, staying there for hours together, without any movement.

The second layer, partially thick, below that smoky layer, moving from North to South, at a very slow pace.

And the third bottom-most layer, dark, thick, rain-hanging; moving from East to West at a greater speed, as if rushing-down to douse a forest-fire.

And, do all these three layers exist, with different movements at different altitudes, in different directions, yet well-maintaining their shape and size, amidst the Air @ 1674 kmph velocity, from West to East, along with the Earth?

The flight of a Helicopter in the sky:

Suppose I station my helicopter at an altitude, facing West, do I still travel @ 1674 kmph reversely from West to East, along with the Earth and Air?

Or, if I station it at an altitude facing East, do I still travel @ 1674 kmph forwardly from West to East, along with the Earth and Air?

Or, if I station it at an altitude facing South or North, do I still travel @ 1674 kmph sideways from West to East, along with the Earth and Air?

Or, if I travel by it from East to West @ 300 kmph, do I actually travel @ 1374 kmph reversely, along with the Earth and Air?

Or, if I travel by it from West to East @ 300 kmph, do I actually travel @ 1974 kmph forwardly, along with the Earth and Air?

I am confident that such an helicopter is yet to be modeled.

Numerous examples on this line can be put forth, to demonstrate that the Air around the Earth does not move from West to East @ 1674 kmph.

In which case, the Earth also does not rotate on its own axis from West to East @ 1674 kmph.

The Earth is motionless, static, still.

Hence, it is deduced that-

The Earth is static, motionless; at the center of the Universe.

The Stars revolve around the Earth..... @ 361° per day from East to West.

The Sun revolves around the Earth..... @ 360° per day from East to West.

The Moon revolves around the Earth.... @ 348° per day from East to West.

The Diversity of Creation:

Now comes the most-interesting part of my concept; Astronomy, geology and biology amalgamated together. Creation of life on the Earth!

It is not that the amoeba or the microorganism or the single simple cell was first created and then it has evolved into various living-beings, finally to man; not that the amoeba or the microorganism or the single simple cell has evolved into a massive, huge banyan tree or something like that.

There are some unique creatures belonging to a particular region; some unique plants belonging to a particular region.

My peacock is to be found only in a few more countries but not anywhere else on the Earth!

My elephant is to be found only in a few more regions but not anywhere else on the Earth!

My penguin and polar-bear are to be found only on the Polar Regions but not anywhere else on the Earth!

My kangaroo is to be found only in Australia and in a few more places but not anywhere else on the Earth!

Even the same creature found in different regions of the Earth, varies in color, size, style of living etc !

The human-races found in different countries and continents of the Earth also differ in many aspects like height, colour, habit, language, facial features, hair-set etc.

Certain creatures, like man, dog, cat, cow, bull, buffalo, monkey; certain birds and certain plants, are found throughout the Earth; in all the continents. But they too, in some aspects, vary from place to place.

The fish, crab, turtle, shark, whale of one water-body differ from the other, in many aspects.

How are we to account for this diversity?

What logic do we have to explain this phenomenon?

The Earth becomes transformed to sustain Life:

As had been established by me previously, the Earth remains at the centre of the Universe; static, motionless, still and steady.

But the Sun continued oscillating to and fro on its orbit; onetime coming a little closer to and the other time moving a little away from the centre of the Universe, i.e from the Earth.

This oscillation of the Sun made the Earth remain molten-hot for some time, when the Sun was nearer; frozen-cold for some time, when the Sun was farther. During the molten-state of the Earth, various gases and dust particles of various elements were thrown throughout the sky; during the frozen-state, those gases and dust particles of various elements condensed and came back to the Earth.

This see-saw process of the Earth was going on for a few million billion years until the Sun settled down on its present orbit; of course, even now with slight, rhythmic but negligible oscillations, to-and-fro the Earth.

During the final stage of settling down of the Sun on its present orbit, the Sun was so accurately placed from the Earth that the heavy dust particles of various elements and gases condensed and showered down on the Earth, leaving behind the fine dust particles of various elements and gases to loiter in the sky.

Those condensed heavy dust particles formed the crust of the Earth, enveloping the molten core of the Earth; while those condensed gases became a liquid; deluging, immersing, submerging the Earth totally.

Those fine dust particles of various elements and gases were still loitering in the sky.

After this stage, due to the warmth of the Sun, evaporation and condensation of the liquid surrounding, immersing the entire Earth, took place for some millions of years.

We name those condensed heavy dust particles as Sodium, Potassium, Magnesium, Iron, etc; those condensed gases as Hydrogen, Oxygen, Nitrogen etc.; that evaporated and condensed liquid as Water.

At a later stage, due to the exact, apt positioning of the Sun as well as the gradual formation of ozone layer around the Earth, a major quantity of water got frozen over the Polar Regions as iceberg.

Hence, due to the recession of water level over the Earth's surface, continents were formed, with various seas, lakes, ponds, rivers, and other waterbodies.

Only at this crucial, critical juncture, creation of life on the Earth could have been possible. Life would not have been created on the Earth, if the Earth were in either molten-hot or frozen-cold state.

Now comes the most vital activity of creation of life, as the Earth is set conducive, favorable to nurture life.

The water vapor, fine dust particles of various elements and gases were still loitering in the sky.

Life is created, at last:

During a massive stroke of a particular type of Global Lightning, a meager quantity of the water vapor, the fine dust particles of various elements and gases, got amalgamated; a fusion took place; the sperm, ovum, pollen and Ovule were formed; finally, fertilization and pollination of all creatures right from the bacteria, amoeba, virus to human beings, animals, birds, aquatics, plants took place in the sky due to permutation and combination.

Even the gender of the fertilized fetus, embryo had been determined in the sky itself, by virtue of chromosome combinations.

After this stage, all those fertilized and pollinated particles rained down over the entire surface of the Earth; over the seas, over the mountains, over the hills, over the lakes, over the ponds, over the rivers, over the plains, over the plateaus, over the deserts, over the polar regions; anywhere and everywhere, leaving behind the remaining water vapor in the sky to form clouds.

If all the iceberg in the polar regions were to melt-down at a time, the Earth would again be deluged, immersed completely by water, leaving behind no room for any creatures to exist; except, of course, the aquatics.

The fertilized and pollinated particles of all creatures and plants thus rained down, were supported by the saline water on the Earth, acting like a womb; enabling the various creatures and plants to mature to their full form, throughout the Earth; thereby completing the creation of life on the Earth. After this date, reproduction continues till date.

Now comes the theory of “Survival of the fittest”. Those living beings which could adapt to the environment of that particular region, particular continent, survived; while those that could not, perished.

Even though the genes/DNA of a particular living-being were the same during creation, they underwent mutations due to the changes in environment, climate, food-habit and other factors of that region, though their basic structure remains the same.

Creation of Life, once only, totally:

It is not that various creatures and plants were created at different periods of time. All were created at the same time, at a stroke of a global Lightning. That is why the common features of a pair of eyes, a pair of nostrils, a mouth with teeth and tongue, a pair of ears, a pair of hands or wings or fins, a pair of legs, a reproductive organ, an excreting organ; a chest cage encompassing a heart, a pair of lungs, a length of intestine, a liver, a spleen; and red blood are found in all the creatures; animals, human beings, birds and the aquatics. The story is the same with plant-kingdom also. Of course, there are some exceptions.

It may be quite easier for me to streamline the process of creation of life on the Earth. But even a negligible mistake, minute flaw in this process, to the tune of, say, 0.0000000000000001% would have resulted in no creation at all. So accurate was the mastermind of mother-nature. All these were possible only because of the Earth’s static, motionless positioning, at the center of the Universe. Otherwise, the Earth also would have been a dead planet, straying like any other heavenly body in the galaxy; and we would not have been created at all, to witness all these miracles.

CONCLUSION

Through observation of various activities taking place both on the earth and in the sky, it has been proved beyond doubt that the earth is remaining static at the centre of the universe.

Based on this fact, creation of life on the earth is derived purely on logical grounds, without contradicting any of the already known scientific general discoveries.